1) Four stage magicians, Axel Flynn, Roxas Hendricks, Demyx Welles, and Xion Reeves are each given a tarot card that lead them to the same empty Twilight Town apartment, where they find information from an unknown benefactor.

2) A year later, the four perform their first major performance as the Four Nobodies in an elaborate Twilight Town show funded by insurance magnate Luxord Caine. Their final trick appears to transport one of the audience members to the vault of their bank, the Crédit Républicain in Paris, where stacks of new euro bills are stored. At the magicians' commands, the fans in the vault activate, drawing the bills into the vents and then showering the Las Vegas crowd with them. The euros are shown to be real, and the vault in Paris is found to be empty of its recent shipment of euros, leading FBI agent Malurxia Rhodes and Interpol agent Larxene Dray, to be partnered and investigate the Nobodies. The two question the magicians but have no evidence to hold them. Malurxia and Larxene turn to Zexion

Novello, a former magician who now helps to explain the tricks behind other magic acts. Zexion demonstrates how they used a mock vault under the Las Vegas stage, and that the group must have stolen the money in Paris before it arrived at the bank, replacing it with flash paper that left no evidence.

3)Malurxia, Larxene, and Zexion follow the Nobodies to their next show in Bushley, where their final trick appears to transfer millions of dollars from Luxord's private accounts to those in the audience, made up of people that were denied insurance claims by Luxord's company in the wake of Hurricane Katrina.

The Four Nobodies travel in a greyhound bus on thier way to Bushley, Axel bringing up plans for thier performance while Roxas and Xion nod thier heads in agreement. Demyx however was distracted by a shower of sparkles, no skittles, no... Sprinkles! That's it, sprinkles created by Roxas's imageneering.

Marluxia and Larxene try to capture the four but the magicians elude capture. Luxord hires Zexion to expose the Nobodies in revenge for the loss of his money. Larxene investigates the Nobodies and determines they are connected to a group called the XIII, a small group of magicians that claim to have access to real magic. She finds out one of the XIII's members, Saix Tsukino, had previously been exposed by Zexion but died in a locked-safe escape trick he was performing to try to regain his standing. Larxene suspects a fifth person is aiding the Nobodies.

Larxene's research leads the FBI to the Twilight Town apartment. When they raid it, the other three escape while Roxas recovers numerous documents- he evokes the undercover authorities into a "fight back and escape" type of fight. He even yanks one of the men's ties and plunges it into a sinkhole, switching the machine on to choke the guy's neck while gasping for air- and then leads the authorities on a high-speed car chase.

Roxas loses control of Demyx's Prius on the bridge, causing it to flip and catch fire. Malurxia is unable to save Roxas, but manages to recover the papers, pointing to the Nobodies's next planned crime, stealing millions of dollars in cash out of a large Elkhorn safe. Malurxia, Larxene, and Zexion find the safe has already been stolen, and when they track it down, its contents have been replaced with balloon animals. The Nobodies broadcast they will perform their final show that night at 5 Pointz, inviting the public to attend. The FBI and police converge on the scene and amid the chaos search for the Nobodies. The remaining Nobodies appear to the crowd, giving their fans a farewell and a message about an ulterior purpose, and then run to jump off a roof; Malurxia attempts to shoot them but Larxene holds him back. The three jump, turning into a shower of money over the crowd. The money is counterfeit, but the audience's race to collect it prevents the authorities from tracking the real Nobodies.

After the show, Zexion walks to his car, only to find it full of the money stolen from the Elkhorn safe, and he is arrested. Malurxia speaks to Zexion in jail, where Zexion slowly comes to realize that Larxene's theory was correct, and Malurxia was the fifth Nobody. Malurxia quietly walks away. Elsewhere, the Nobodies, including Roxas who had faked his death, meet at the carousel in Sugar Sand Park, and use their tarot cards to turn it on. Malurxia arrives and welcomes the four to the XIII.

Later, at the Pont des Arts, Malurxia meets with Larxene and reveals he is Tsukino's son. He brought the Nobodies together to get retribution for his father's death: the Elkhorn Safe Company for providing a faulty safe that led to the accident, Zexion for humiliating him and the Crédit Républicain and Luxord's insurance companies for failing to pay out afterwards. Larxene, who has come into a romantic relationship with Malurxia, decides not to turn him in. She takes a lock and a key that Malurxia produces, putting the lock on a chain fence and throwing the key into the Seine river.

Years later, the Nobodies and XIII return back from Earth to Co:pern:ica to finally have a re-union party at the Twilight Town Golf and Country Club center.

Just before attending, the Nobodies explode out of Walmart, being chased by a group of fangirls that scream thier names behind them.

One year after outwitting the FBI, the remaining members of the Four Nobodies—Axel Hayes, Demyx Welles and Roxas Hendericks—are in hiding, awaiting further instructions from The XIII, the secret society of magicians they've been recruited into. Hayes, having grown tired of waiting for a mission, seeks out The XIII himself. His search leads him to an underground tunnel in which he hears a voice that tells him that his wait may be coming to an end. The Nobodies handler FBI agent Marluxia Rhodes ultimately assigns them a new mission, exposing corrupt businessman Aeolus Case whose new software secretly steals data on its users for Case's benefit. Yuffie May is added to the team to replace former member Xion Reeves, who has left the Nobodies.

The Nobodies hijack the launch party for the new software but the show is interrupted by a mysterious individual who reveals to the world that Hendericks, believed to be dead, is actually alive, and that Rhodes is their mole, forcing Marluxia to escape. While escaping, the Nobodies enter their escape tube on a roof and emerge in Macau, where they are captured by mercenaries and brought before Chase's employer, technology prodigy Sephiroth Mabry, Case's former business partner who faked his death after Case stole Sephiroth's company. Mabry conscripts the Nobodies into stealing the data-mining device developed by Case to prevent Case from using it. The chip allows the user to decrypt and access any electronic device around the world. Hayes agrees to steal the device and contacts The XIII to arrange the device handover once stolen. Before attempting to do so, they head over to a Magic Shop run by Xaldin where they kindly ask for Magic Supplies, their surprise news over Xaldin being part of the XIII found themselves a deal of alliance. Meanwhile, Rhodes is branded a fugitive and forced to spring his rival Zexion Novello, whom Rhodes blames for the death of his father, out of jail for help.

The Nobodies infiltrate the facility and steal the chip. Hayes is then confronted by Mabry, revealing that Hayes had been fooled into thinking that Mabry was The XIII. Rhodes intervenes and pretends to retrieve the device but is captured by Mabry's forces and taken to a nearby oil yacht where he learns Mabry is acting on behalf of his father, Luxord Tressler, the businessman whom Rhodes employed the Nobodies to expose in the first film. Tressler places Rhodes in a replica of the same safe that his father died in and leaves him to drown, but Rhodes escapes thanks to the pin in his father's watch. After the rescue, the Nobodies find that the chip they had stolen appears to be a fake.

Rhodes and the Nobodies broadcast that they will be performing live in London at midnight on New Year's Eve. Mabry and Tressler think that they have the computer chip, they make haste to London, where the Nobodies are performing a series of tricks live on the streets.

1) Roxas Hendericks- Guess the Queen behind 3 Jacks

2) Axel Hayes- Controlling the Rain.

Reverse Rain

3) Demyx Welles- A chat with his brother, snaps him to sleep; Roxas takes over and instructs him to throw them out of the plane.

4) Yuffie May- Make a yacht fly from Point A to B starting with a bunch of doves including snapping thier head off and taking off in fear from someone's pants.

Mabry, Tressler and Chase discover that Rhodes is still alive and capture the five, before boarding them on his private plane. Mabry takes the chip card from them and Rhodes along with the other Nobodies are thrown out of the plane in flight. However, Tressler finds that the plane has never taken off, and instead they were tricked into boarding a plane on a barge in the middle of the River Thames, their criminal activities being broadcast live to the world by the Nobodies in the process.

Mabry, Tressler and Chase are arrested by the FBI, and Rhodes entrusts the information they've gathered on the real criminals' activities to the FBI, who allows him a head start to escape. Rhodes and the Nobodies are then taken by Xaldin to a secret library in Greenwich observatory where they are reunited with Novello, who reveals himself to be senior in the XIII's leadership and Saix Tsukino's partner, having masqueraded as his rival as part of their mutual act. Before Novello leaves, he asks Rhodes to be his successor in the XIII.
